Colder Products Company

2820 Cleveland Ave. N

www.cpcworldwide.com

One of the newest businesses to open in Roseville is also one of the largest. Colder Products Company (CPC) recently opened its 132,000 square foot headquarters.

CPC had been operating out of three separate locations on the Minneapolis/St. Paul border. The company is growing rapidly, with its local employee base increasing by 50 percent in the past two years. It needed a new facility that would foster collaboration, accommodate future growth and maximize efficiencies.

CPC is a manufacturer of quick disconnect couplings, fittings and connectors used in fluid management systems. Its connectors improve the functionality of equipment and processes in many industries including biopharma, electronics, food and beverage, printing, medical and more.

One of its products includes connectors used in ventilators. In March of this year, CPC received a call for tens of thousands of connectors for a company rapidly expanding its ventilator production in response to the pandemic. Fulfilling unexpected COVID-related orders has coincided with the move to the new headquarters. Fortunately, the company's new facility is designed to optimize production, so CPC has been able to address its usual business and the uptick in healthcare-related orders.

Roseville offered an ideal location to meet CPC's needs. The site of CPC's new facility near Highway 35W was easily accessible and ideal for shipping products. Roseville also offered area amenities including hotels, restaurants and retail outlets and ample parking and room for future growth. The city has been a valued partner in the development of CPC headquarters. With the help of the city and state, CPC redeveloped a former brownfield into a home base for nearly 500 employees.

CPC partners with distributors and engineering resources across the globe. The company has operations in the U.S., Germany and China, where they also manufacture products, along with sales offices in 13 countries. The Roseville location will draw employees, customers and partners from across the world, contributing to the economic vitality of the community.
